

Liberal media downplaying Planned Parenthood crimes

Hopefully you had a chance to see some of the undercover videos released by David Daleiden and the Center for Medical Progress which exposed various senior Planned Parenthood officials callously discussing the unlawful sale of fetal tissue. Perhaps most shocking and disgusting was listening to Mary Gatter (president of PPEA's Medical Director's Council) haggling over the price of body parts and suggesting abortion methods that she called "less crunchy" so as to not destroy body parts. She stunningly quipped that she hoped for better prices because she "wanted a Lamborghini."

Such self-incriminating comments by Planned Parenthood officials aren't the exception, for Daleiden claimed, "We have thousands of hours of video and audio. This is not all we have. This is just the beginning." Unfortunately liberal media outlets have been predictably reluctant to give much press to this embarrassing issue so it's possible you haven't heard much concerning these videos.

If it were not so fiendishly hypocritical, it would almost be comical to listen to protests from Planned Parenthood officials and the left—especially the complaints that the videos were done by "deceptive means (undercover) and deceptively edited." Fears about undercover videoing never stopped NBC, CBS, or ABC from exposing companies or the government when they thought something questionable was afoot. In fact, police regularly go undercover to catch those suspected of breaking laws. How ridiculously lame for Planned Parenthood officials to essentially complain their ugly video confessions shouldn't count because they were unaware they were caught in a sting-like fashion. If you watch all the videos, you will see there was precious little coaxing required for them to reveal the truth about their sordid activities, and no slanted editing was even needed as they shared their thoughts freely with obvious relish at times. Amazingly, Texas columnist Dave McNeely went as far as to absurdly protest that Planned Parenthood was trapped like Cecil the Lion and equated Daleiden's group with the law-breaking poachers! It is bad enough the liberal media gave far more attention to the killing of one African lion than to the deaths of millions of American infants, but for McNeely to have the gall to transpose Daleiden and his team with the "real poachers" in this scenario (when in fact it is the abortionists who are doing the killing and then claiming innocence just as that rich dentist did) reveals just how twisted liberal thinking can really be.

Just a few days ago I participated in a nationwide conference call for pastors. The purpose was to encourage pastors to build on the appropriate outrage over these barbaric practices of harvesting body parts of innocent babies and to once and for all end taxpayer support for Planned Parenthood (500 million a year). We were encouraged not only to speak from the pulpit on this issue but also to ask our congregations to fast and pray over this on Sept. 9th. Likewise we were encouraged to ask our people to make phone calls to our representatives to inform them we don't want our tax dollars funding Planned Parenthood anymore.

As you may know many conservative politicians who have seen these videos are incensed as well, but they need to hear from you and me that we are fed up with this holocaust that we are being forced to help subsidize.

Please do your part and make sure your church is involved in this important cause.
